Aliran describes itself as the first non-partisan, multi-ethnic reform movement to have emerged in Malaysia. "There have been reform movements in the past confined to particular communities or to particular issues. Our movement, on the other hand, not only draws its strength from various religious and linguistic groups but is also concerned with the total reform of Malaysian society as an endeavour which will span a few decades. Aliran's reforms will be directed towards the creation of a society where the spiritual and material development of Man and his community would be based upon certain fundamental moral values acceptable to the Malaysian nation as a whole."

Before the emergence of ACHR there was no common forum or facility for NGO's, professionals and grassroots groups working in Asian cities to exchange ideas, despite an expressed need to share experiences, tackle the large problem of forced evictions in the regions cities, develop opportunities for organisations of the poor and consider their place in city planning. It was with these intentions in mind that ACHR was formed in 1988. Since then, the links between coalition members have matured, regional programmes have been formalised and ACHR has become recognized as one of the most important players in urban poor development in the region by international agencies and urban actors.

FAIR - Fairness & Accuracy in Reporting.

New York 2005-2006.

19 docs.

FAIR, the national media watch group, has been offering well-documented criticism of media bias and censorship since 1986. They work to invigorate the First Amendment by advocating for greater diversity in the press and by scrutinizing media practices that marginalize public interest, minority and dissenting viewpoints. As an anti-censorship organization, they expose neglected news stories and defend working journalists when they are muzzled. As a progressive group, FAIR believes that structural reform is ultimately needed to break up the dominant media conglomerates, establish independent public broadcasting and promote strong non-profit sources of information.
